YALE SCHOOL OF ART

The Yale School of Art opened its doors on October 15, 1869, becoming the first art school affiliated with a university of higher learning in the United States. Today, the graduate student experience is centered on each artist’s own studio practice, supported by faculty, visiting artists and critics, and perhaps most importantly, by one another, as they develop a personal studio practice. The school offers rigorous MFA programs in Graphic Design, Painting/Printmaking, Photography, and Sculpture, fostering a community of critical dialogue and creative exploration.
